Are all GAMES worth playing?

READING 11 Make inferences and draw conclusions about persuasive text. 11A Compare and contrast persuasive texts that reached different conclusions about the same issue and explain how the authors reached their conclusions through analyzing the evidence each presents. 11B Analyze the use of such rhetorical and logical fallacies as loaded terms, caricatures, and leading questions in persuasive texts.

Games are supposed to be fun, right? But have you ever watched a customer at a carnival game spend 20 or 30 dollars trying to win a cheap stuffed animal? Seeing this might make you question not only how fun it is, but also whether or not all games are worth playing. You're about to read two very different opinions on whether the game of dodgeball is fun or torture for those who play it.

LIST IT Work with a group to make two lists. On the first, list five or more games you think are worth playing. On the second, list five or more games you think are not worth the time, money, or risk. Compare your lists with others'. Were there any games that appeared on both the good and not-so-good lists?

● ELEMENTS OF NONFICTION: PERSUASION

Writers often rely on more than arguments to be convincing. They may use a tone that encourages readers to take their side or use persuasive techniques such as these:

- Emotional appeals—the use of words, descriptions, or images that call forth strong feelings, such as pity, fear, or anger. “Innocent puppies are horribly mistreated in puppy mills.”
- Ethical appeals—attempts to gain moral support for a claim by linking the claim to a widely accepted value. “We need this law because animals deserve decent treatment.”

As you read, notice the ways the authors try to convince you.

● READING SKILL: ANALYZE RHETORIC AND REASONING

When reading an argument, look for fallacies. A rhetorical fallacy is writing that is false or misleading. A logical fallacy is an error in reasoning. Here are three common fallacies:

- Loaded terms—words or phrases with strongly positive or negative connotations. Using immature to describe a teenager casts the person in a more negative light than using young.
- Leading questions—questions that contain their answers, such as, “You don’t want all the forests to disappear, do you?”
- Caricatures—cartoon-like portrayals of opposing arguments, such as, “They want you to go around hugging trees.”

As you read the selections, jot down any fallacies you find and note their locations with the text’s line numbers on a chart.

▲ VOCABULARY IN CONTEXT

The boldfaced words help to convey opinions about playing dodgeball. Try to figure out each word’s meaning.

1. If you witness someone cheating, report the impropriety.
2. Students are not adequately prepared for competition.
3. We were able to eliminate the other players one by one.
4. Is dodgeball a safe way to take out aggression?
5. The school is going to ban the game.

Rick Reilly

born 1958

Funny Man with Serious Talent

Many Sports Illustrated readers turn to the last page of their magazine first in order to read Rick Reilly’s weekly column “Life of Reilly.” The column, along with his novels and essay collections, has earned Reilly the reputation as “one of the funniest humans on the planet.” Reilly has written about everything from ice-skating to the Iditarod, the Alaskan dog race. His adventures include facing fastballs from eight-time All-Star pitcher Nolan Ryan, cycling with seven-time Tour de France winner Lance Armstrong, and playing 108 holes of golf in one day. He began his sports writing career as a sophomore at the University of Colorado, taking phoned-in high-school volleyball scores for his hometown newspaper. After graduation, he moved on to stints at the Denver Post and the Los Angeles Times, eventually landing at Sports Illustrated in 1985. He has been voted National Sportswriter of the Year 10 times.

National Association for Sport and Physical Education

The NASPE is made up of gym teachers, coaches, athletic directors, athletic trainers, sport management professionals, researchers, and college faculty. The association provides a way for all of these professionals to help one another to improve physical education in schools. By researching, developing standards, and spreading information, NASPE helps students learn about fitness and stay active all their lives.

an unsuitable or inappropriate act or quality

GRAMMAR IN CONTEXT

In line 4, the writer uses parentheses to let you know the abbreviation for the National Association for Sport and Physical Education.

A PERSUASION

What is the NASPE's position on dodgeball in school physical education programs?

adequately

enough to satisfy a requirement or meet a need

B PERSUASION

Reread lines 18–24. Based on these lines, how would you describe the tone of this document?

With the recent release of both a movie and television show about dodgeball, debate about the game's merits and improprieties has escalated in the media and on the NASPE listserv.¹ Thus, the National Association for Sport and Physical Education (NASPE) would like to reiterate its position about including dodgeball in school physical education programs. ◆

NASPE believes that dodgeball is not an appropriate activity for K–12 school physical education programs. The purpose of physical education is to provide students with:

- The knowledge, skills, and confidence needed to be physically active for a lifetime
- A daily dose of physical activity for health benefits
- Positive experiences so that kids want to be physically active outside of physical education class and throughout their lifetime

The goals of physical education can be obtained through a wide variety of appropriate physical activities. A

Getting and keeping children and adolescents active is one of the biggest challenges facing parents and youth leaders.

- 61.5% of children aged 9–13 years do not participate in any organized physical activity during their non-school hours and 22.6% do not engage in any free-time physical activity.
- One-third of high school students are not adequately active and over 10% do not participate in any physical activity at all.
- 16% of U.S. youth aged 6–19 are overweight—triple the proportion of 25 years ago. B

According to NASPE's Appropriate Practices for Elementary School Physical Education (2000), "in a quality physical education class teachers involve ALL children in activities that allow them to participate actively, both physically and mentally. Activities such as relay races, dodgeball, and elimination tag provide limited opportunities for everyone in the class, especially the slower, less agile students who need the activity the most.”

The students who are eliminated first in dodgeball are typically the ones who most need to be active and practice their skills. Many times these students are also the ones with the least amount of confidence in their physical abilities. Being targeted because they are the “weaker” players, and being hit by a hard-thrown ball, does not help kids to develop confidence.

The arguments most often heard in favor of dodgeball are that it allows for the practice of important physical skills—and kids like it.

- Dodgeball does provide a means of practicing some important physical skills—running, dodging, throwing, and catching.
- However, there are many activities that allow practice of these skills without using human targets or eliminating students from play.
- Some kids may like it—the most skilled, the most confident. But many do not! Certainly not the student who gets hit hard in the stomach, head, or groin. And it is not appropriate to teach our children that you win by hurting others. C

In a recent article about the new GSN (games network) TV show called “Extreme Dodgeball,” there is talk of “developing and executing extreme strategies to annihilate opponents” and the use of terms such as “throw-to-kill ratios,” and “headshots.” NASPE asks, “Is this the type of game that you want children to be exposed to?” D

D ANALYZE RHETORIC AND REASONING

A leading question is a question that contains its answer. A rhetorical question is one that has such an obvious answer that it does not require a reply. Reread lines 49–50. Is this a leading question or a rhetorical question?

E PERSUASION

What words and phrases in the first sentence make Rick Reilly's tone immediately clear?

F PERSUASION

Why does Neil Williams object to dodgeball? Describe Reilly's response to this objection.

I kid you not. Dodgeball has been outlawed by some school districts in New York, Texas, Utah and Virginia. Many more are thinking about it, like Cecil County, Md., where the school board wants to ban any game with "human targets." E

Human targets? What's tag? What's a snowball fight? What's a close play at second? Neil Williams, a physical education professor at Eastern Connecticut State, says dodgeball has to go because it "encourages the best to pick on the weak." Noooo! You mean there's weak in the world? There's strong? Of course there is, and dodgeball is one of the first opportunities in life to figure out which one you are and how you're going to deal with it. F

We had a bully, Big Joe, in our seventh grade. Must have weighed 225 pounds, . . . We also had a kid named Melvin, who was so thin we could've faxed him from class to class. I'll never forget the dodgeball game in which Big Joe had a ball in each hand and one sandwiched

A caricature is a cartoon-like description of an opposing argument. Reread lines 27–30 to find the caricature. Then note it on your chart.

H PERSUASION

What widely accepted value does Reilly use to make an ethical appeal? Consider whether he seems to respect the job of filling chalupas.

I ANALYZE RHETORIC AND REASONING

Reread lines 34–51. Sometimes writers try to convince you that a position is wrong because it could result in a ridiculous outcome. Identify one ridiculous outcome proposed by Reilly in lines 34–51.

between his knees, firing at our side like a human tennis-ball machine, who'd done it and saw that it was none other than Melvin, all 83 pounds

Some of these . . . whiners say dodgeball is inappropriate in these violent times. Are you kidding? Dodgeball is one of the few times in life when you get to let out your aggressions, no questions asked. We don't need less dodgeball in schools, we need more!

I know what all these . . . parents want. They want their Ambers and their Alexanders to grow up in a cozy womb of noncompetition, where everybody shares tofu¹ and Little Red Riding Hood and the big, bad wolf 30 set up a commune.² Then their kids will stumble out into the bright light of the real world and find out that, yes, there's weak and there's strong and teams and sides and winning and losing. You'll recognize those kids. They'll be the ones filling up chalupas.³ Very noncompetitive. G H

But Williams and his fellow whiners aren't stopping at dodgeball. In their Physical Education Hall of Shame they've also included duck-duck-goose and musical chairs. Seriously. So, if we give them dodgeball, you can look for these games to be banned next:

Tag. Referring to any child as it is demeaning and hurtful. Instead of the child hollering, "You're it!" we recommend, "You're special!"

40 Baseball. Involves wrong-headed notions of stealing, errors and gruesome hit-and-run. Players should always be safe, never out.

Capture the flag. Mimics war.

Kick the can. Unfair to the can.

If we let these PC twinkies⁴ have their way, we'll be left with:

Duck-duck-duck. Teacher spends the entire hour patting each child softly on the head.

Upsy down. The entire class takes turns fluffing the gym teacher's pillow before her nap.

Swedish baseball. Players are allowed free passage to first, second or 50 third, where they receive a relaxing two-minute massage from opposing players. I

1. tofu (to'fōō): a protein-rich soybean curd that many vegetarians eat in place of meat.

2. commune (kōm'yōōn'): a cooperative community in which a group of people who are not necessarily related live and work together.

3. chalupas (chĕ-lā'pās): fried tortillas filled with meat, a Mexican dish similar to tacos that is served at several U.S. fast-food chains.

4. PC twinkies: Reilly's expression for people who are too concerned (politically correct) with offending others by words or actions.

Comprehension

1. Recall What reason does the NASPE give for once again announcing its position on dodgeball in school physical education programs?
2. Clarify Reread lines 15–22 of “The Weak Shall Inherit the Gym.” What did dodgeball do for Melvin?

READING 11 Make inferences and draw conclusions about persuasive text. 11A Compare and contrast persuasive texts that reached different conclusions about the same issue and explain how the authors reached their conclusions through analyzing the evidence each presents. 11B Analyze the use of such rhetorical and logical fallacies as loaded terms, caricatures, leading questions in persuasive texts.

Critical Analysis

3. Examine Name-Calling Attempting to discredit a position or idea by attacking people associated with it is name-calling. Find examples of name-calling in “The Weak Shall Inherit the Gym.” Does it make Reilly’s argument more or less convincing? Give reasons for your answer.
4. Analyze Tone What is Reilly’s tone, or attitude toward opponents of dodgeball? Explain how this tone might persuade readers to adopt his opinion of the game.
5. Make Judgments A stereotype is an overgeneralization about a person or group. In your opinion, is Reilly guilty of stereotyping? Explain.
6. Compare Persuasive Texts Consider the arguments and persuasive techniques that the NASPE and Reilly use to convince readers to adopt their positions. Then explain how each text reaches its conclusion, noting any similarities and differences between them.
7. Evaluate Rhetoric and Reasoning Reilly is writing to be funny, but he also has a point to make. Are you convinced by his argument and persuasion? Think about the fallacies you noted on your chart and any you discovered in answering questions 3 and 5. Then support your decision.

Extension and Challenge

8. Speaking and Listening Form two teams, one representing the NASPE’s viewpoint and one representing Rick Reilly’s. Then, with your team, answer the question, “Should opportunities for intense physical competition be provided in middle schools?” from the perspective of your author. Debate the question with the other team, using support from the selections.

Are all GAMES worth playing?

Now that you have read the two selections, revisit the two lists of games you created at the start of this lesson. Would you move any of the games from one list to the other? Why or why not?

Conventions in Writing

◆ GRAMMAR IN CONTEXT: Use Punctuation Correctly

There are three types of punctuation marks that are especially useful for conveying additional information. Parentheses are punctuation marks used in sentences to set off extra information, such as explanations or comments. Brackets are punctuation marks used in quotations to set off extra information inserted by the writer (as opposed to the person or source being quoted). An ellipsis is a set of three spaced periods (. . . , not ...) preceded and followed by a space. Use an ellipsis to show that something has been left out of a quotation. If you use an ellipsis at the end of a sentence, include a period before the ellipsis.

Original: Rick Reilly says, “They want their Ambers and their Alexanders to grow up in a cozy womb of noncompetition, where everybody shares tofu and Little Red Riding Hood and the big, bad wolf set up a commune.”

Revised: Rick Reilly says (of these parents), “They want their . . . [children] to grow up in a cozy womb of noncompetition. . . .”

PRACTICE For each item, revise the following sentence according to the instructions given. Use correct punctuation.

Reilly mockingly says, “In their Physical Education Hall of Shame they’ve also included duck-duck-goose and musical chairs.”

1. Insert of Neil Williams and his supporters after “says.”
2. Insert the abbreviation PEHS after “Physical Education Hall of Shame.”
3. Leave out “duck-duck-goose and.”
4. Leave out “duck-duck-goose and musical chairs” and insert kindergarten games in their place.

For more help with punctuation, see page R50 in the Grammar Handbook.
